FAQs about SRP

What if we can't make it in every week to pick up the latest weekly challenge? You can print out weekly challenges from home beginning June 17th. If you don't have a printer, you can simply view each weekly challenge and then keep track of completed activities on a piece of paper which can then be turned in for a prize. Go here for printable challenges: <http://tinyurl.com/grhz34g>

What if we can't make it in every week to turn in our challenges and pick up our prizes? You can turn in your completed challenges at any time after the date shown on the front of each Weekly Challenge. As long as they are turned in by August 31st, they will count toward your 5 challenges required to get a free book (guaranteed). Weekly prizes will be awarded while supplies last.

If I miss a weekly challenge, can I make it up? As long as all challenges are turned in by the deadline of August 31st, prizes will be awarded while supplies last.

What if I complete my 5 challenges in the first 5 weeks? You'll get your free book and then you can continue to do the remaining challenges to earn more weekly prizes.

Can we still keep track of our reading? Absolutely! Kids and/or families who would like to track their summer reading can track their reading on their own. We will not have an online option or a paper log this year. However, if you would like to track your progress, this might be a fun and creative project for your family to work on in June. Check out Pinterest and other Internet resources for fun ideas.

What do you have for kids under 3 years? You can register your "under threes" for our year-round program called 1,000 Books Before Kindergarten. You can get more details at the Youth Reference Desk.
